ON THE MARCH WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY. In Ethiopia—(8:30 a. m., November 4. Copyright Associated Press)—An Italian army column poured through Hauzien shortly after day-break today and marched on toward Makale—38 miles due south. With the capture and occupation of Hauzien the Italians had covered one-third of the 50 miles which lay between them and Makale when they started out early Sunday. Italian air squadrons machine-gunned a force of several thousand Ethiopians which was found gathered around Makale, the city toward which the Fascist forces are marching.

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia—(Copyright Associated Press)—The Ethiopian government announced Monday that 30 women, 15 children and 100 cows were killed during an attack by Italian airplanes Saturday at Gorenkel. The casualties were said to have occurred while the cattle were being watered at a spring.

ON THE MARCH WITH THE ITALIAN TROOPS in Northern Ethiopia, (2 p. m., Sunday) No. 3.—General Alessandro Pirzio-Biroli's Askaris, pushing on toward Makale in the second great Italian advance of the Ethiopian war, this noon occupied Enda Abbasas. Thus the main body of native troops gained a commanding position at the end of a fertile, well-watered flat.

By lunch time Monday they expected to reach Hauzien and occupy the heights beyond the town. Native women came out of Enda Abbasas to meet the Italians with signs of welcome. Later, large herds of cattle which had been concealed in the bush were led out to their normal pastures and large numbers were bought by the troops.

The Blackshirt line of Gen. Ruggero Santini now stretches from Debra Sion on the trail called "English street" to a position in advance of Amba Sion, along a looping road which runs from Addis to Hauzien. The Italians now are expected to enter Hauzien in advance of the main body of Pirzio-Biroli's Askaris, which is keeping slightly to the south of the Italian right wing.

Amba Sion and other important monasteries are perched on rocky heights. The pealing of bells made of stone welcomed the Italians, and the monks in a procession came bearing gifts of sweetmeats, incense, chickens, and eggs. The head abbot (bispish) made a formal act of submission.

The main column of Italy's powerful army encountered no resistance in the first five hours of its big push on Makale today. The troops trudged along a newly-constructed road among rugged hills until they reached the

More than 113 deaths were reported from 23 states in week-end automobile accidents. A train-auto wreck helped to raise the toll at Onida, Ill., four deaths in a Chicago area deaths to 15. Cook county authorities announced 98 auto deaths occurred in October. Nor San Francisco a buggy driver was killed when his vehicle collided with a car. "Horrible" was Police Chief James E. Davis' word for the Los Angeles city and county total of 801 deaths and an estimated 25,000 injured in traffic since January 1. "If someone went around the streets with a shotgun and killed and injured that many people, the city would be an armed camp, with every citizen hunting down the murderer," he said. The Ramblers with 45 seconds to go put over the touchdown that gave them an 18-to-13 victory and kept their record clear for another national championship. The Ohio Buckeyes, coached by Francis A. Schmidt, former University of Arkansas mentor, had Notre Dame down 13 to 0 at the opening of the fourth quarter. The Ramblers passed the way to two touchdowns, but missed goal on each—the score standing 13 to 12. One final drive down the field put over a third tally, for the most thrilling football spectacle in years. The game was seen by 80,000. TOP—Here is a Notre Dame blunder in the first quarter. #### Watermelon Production to Increase, Prices to Fall, Says U. S.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An increase in world consumption of foreign cotton almost corresponding to the number of bales decrease in the consumption of American lint was disclosed Monday in the Department of Agriculture's outlook for 1935-36. The report attributed the decline in American cotton consumption to its "relatively high price" as compared with foreign lint. The Department of Agriculture predicted Monday that the present "upward trend" in farm income will continue in 1936. "The demand for farm products in 1936 will likely be greater than in 1935," the department said in its annual outlook. "Consumer buying power in the United States will likely be increased in 1936."

LABOR, FARM LOYAL

Industrial Workers and West Likely to Stand by the President

By FRAZIER HUNT
(Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.)
One year from Tuesday, America marches to the polls to elect a President. For the past six weeks I have been industrious over the dozen states of the industrial sections—where approximately half of the 40,000,000 voters live—finding out what men and women think of Roosevelt today and what they will probably think of him next year.

Here are my conclusions:
At the present moment Roosevelt is at his lowest ebb. On the surface there is a strong out-tide running against him, but underneath there is still a powerful Roosevelt current that can easily sweep him to victory.

Millions of people are critical of the administration, but opposition has crystallized neither in a definite program nor a leader. No single name in the Republican directory evinces the slightest enthusiasm for the average anti-Roosevelt voter.

Feeling against Hoover is a little less bitter, but it takes a most sensitive listening device to record it. Such names as Col. Knox, Col. Roosevelt, Senator Borah and Vandenberg, and even Governor Landon utterly fail to spark on the battery of the average citizen.

Roosevelt's resentment seems to center around lack of economy and an increase in the cost of living—coupled with a blind demand for change. To increase the bewilderment, America faces the curious anomaly of a return of prosperity with 10,000,000 more or less permanent unemployed.

The Democrats are about to steal the old unboatable Republican rally call of "the full dinner pail."

On the other side of their campaign banner they will emblazon the Wilsonian slogan of "he kept us out of war."

The threat of high taxes at present is driving many "Little Haves" into an anti-Roosevelt alliance with "Big Haves."

The coming election might easily become a straight arithmetic problem: Can the sum total of the Little Haves and the Big Haves equal the Have Nots plus the midwest farmers? My own motor-ambing observations force me to give it to the Have Nots and the farmers by three to two.

Huey Long's death removes the greatest single menace to Roosevelt's return. Yet, strangely enough, the constant pressure for more and more radical legislation that was forced by Huey built up a vast loyal legion of F. D. R. supporters among the lowly millions. A turn to the right by Roosevelt can do him incredible harm among these same millions.

Patron Coughlin can assure the election of Roosevelt. His defection would seriously embarrass the President but probably not defeat him. The radio priest's strength is less than half what it was a year ago.

Except for California the promise that was Dr. Townsend has largely disappeared. The six million members of the A. F. of L. are at least 75 per cent for Roosevelt.

Frazier Hunt Gets Lowdown on 1936

Frazier Hunt, N. E. A. Service's roving reporter, today opens a six-article series on "Listening to America." The synopsis of the six articles, the first of which appears in an adjoining column of today's Star, follows:
Article One—A summary of political and social sentiment in Industrial America, one year before the 1936 presidential election. Based on hundreds of talks with working men, their families and their employers. Also, a brief view of the somewhat changed attitudes of persons in states farther west which Hunt visited five months ago when he made another reportorial tour for NEA to obtain material for the new-famous series called "Listening to America."

Two—How steel workers from Chicago to Pittsburgh feel about the New Deal and national affairs in general.

Three—Unorganized and somewhat disillusioned auto workers still cling to Roosevelt.

Four—Along the industrial front in the American Ruhr. Intimate interviews with men in the rubber factories.

Five—How 350 coal miners have changed the political complexion of Pennsylvania.

Six—In the New England industrial centers where, Frazier Hunt believes, the New Deal has lost more ground than anywhere else in the country.

Forced to Take Action Following Metal's Flight Across Pacific

SHANGHAI, China—(AP)—The Chinese government moved drastically Sunday night to solve its long standing monetary problems by announcing a program of monetary reform. It includes:
1. Nationalization of silver.
2. Restriction of bank note issues to three government-owned banks.
3. Stabilization of the Chinese dollar at its present level.
4. Legalization of bank notes for payment of all debts expressed in terms of silver.

Announcement of the program by Finance Minister H. H. Kung was followed by a government decree of effective Monday.

Under the nationalization order, all holders of silver are required to exchange it for legal tender notes. Kung said. The finance minister's statement also said that for the purpose of stabilizing the dollar at the present level, (now approximately 30 cents in United States money), "the government banks will buy and sell foreign exchange in unlimited quantities."

The Hope-Prescott football game will be played in the Hope High School stadium at 7:45 p. m. Friday. Arrangements to bring the game here were completed at 2:30 p. m. Monday and announced by Coach Foy H. Hammons.

Season tickets nor student tickets will not be honored at the game. Admission of 25 and 50 cents would have been charged students and adults going to Prescott had the game been played there.

The same charge will be made here, saving fans the cost of transportation to Prescott, it was pointed out.

Borah Opens Fire on G. O. P. Bosses

Will Bolt to Roosevelt If Reactionaries Name 1936 Candidate

BOISE, Idaho—Senator William E. Borah, Republican, Idaho, who is leading all the polls on choice of a Republican candidate for president, declared defiance at former President Hoover and the Republican old guard in an interview here Sunday.

The bosses who have dominated the party for decades failed when in power to protect the masses of the people from exploitation, he asserted, and should never be entrusted with power again. He charged that they have no program now for relief of the millions of farmers and working men suffering from the depression but are relying upon political manipulation to regain power.

The blistering pronouncement was Borah's declaration of war on the old guard, a war he intends to wage in the presidential primaries, in the platform committee of the national convention in the balloting for nominee for president. Borah will endeavor to rally a majority of the party to support of liberal platform and a liberal candidate.

Although Borah will be a candidate for the nomination in the presidential primaries, it will be not so much to gain the prize for himself as to mobilize a body of delegates sufficiently strong to dictate a liberal platform and the nomination of a liberal candidate, whether himself or another.

Of those figuring in current appraisal of Republican presidential timber, Borah looks with favor upon Governor Alf Landon of Kansas and Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan.

If the old guard succeeds in naming the Republican candidate, Western Republicans, in the opinion of the senator, will bolt the ticket, vote Democratic and assure re-election of the president. If the Republicans write a platform and name a candidate satisfactory to Borah, the senator will take the stump and go the limit to put the West back in the Republican column on election day.

MIAMI, Fla.—(AP)—Relief workers Monday hastened evacuation of the Florida Keys, where approximately 400 war veterans and others were killed in a Labor day hurricane, as another freak storm moved menacingly toward the coast between Miami and Palm Beach.

Meteorologists predicted the storm would pass a short distance east of Great Abaco Island.

Now described as a "tropical disturbance" although it was spawned in the Atlantic ocean west of Bermuda, the storm was the second within a short time to turn southward, a rare occurrence.

New Deal Sliding

Roosevelt. If the Republicans could by magic produce a strong, picturesque leader who by sheer personality would attract the masses and one of the interests and classes and emotions of this vast land they might seriously challenge the rule of Roosevelt. But there is no such figure in sight, and consequently no such threat.

Roosevelt Slips
Recovering some of the same ground I studied in my survey five months ago (when I wrote without apology that my belief was that Roosevelt was in the bag and would carry from 38 to 40 states) I find that in the middle west there is a considerable turning of the white collar "Little Haves" from F. D. R. There is a growing desire for change.

A Chicago business man, who five months ago was less positive in his opinions, put it this way to me: "Over America there are millions of more or less independent middle-class citizens. They voted for Wilson in 1916 and for Roosevelt in 1932. This group is now turning from Roosevelt. They know they will have to pay the bills for his orgy of spending by higher and higher taxes. They are against the whole relief program. This feeling started about a year ago but it has gained its real momentum during the past ninety days."

Down in the rich corn belt of middle Illinois I talked with a normally Republican farmer whom I had interviewed in early June. He was then a little skeptical about the AAA. He felt that the drought had been the true cause of the increased prices. Now, he said to me, "Most farmers are getting around to the belief that we must have some sort of crop control. Maybe the 3A's is not perfect but it does keep us from wrecking ourselves by unrestrained over-production. I guess we've got to give Roosevelt and Wallace credit for what they've done. I reckon I'll vote for him—and so will most of the farmers around here."

Down in Indiana on the beautiful Wabash river I visited an elevator man I had spent a summer afternoon with five months ago. He had said then, "I don't see a chance of beating Roosevelt unless something unforeseen comes up. That something must be pretty big." This October day he had changed his tune. He said: "Most of the Republicans who voted for Roosevelt in '32—and he was elected by the Republicans—are returning to the old fold. People who own property of any kind are beginning to be alarmed over the waste of government money. And they're beginning to realize that the whole New Deal is a tragic flop that not only has cost billions and billions but has created a class who under relief have learned how to live without working. Fully 80 per cent of the Republicans who backed in 1932 will vote against Roosevelt next year."

In Industrial America
But this present survey has to do with the industrial east—that is, east of the Mississippi.

In this ever-seething industrial cauldron—the American melting pot of foreign and nativeborn peoples—I found workers willing, even eager to pour forth their hopes, their fears, their belief and their disbelief in the present social and political set-up.

Let me pick at random from the pages of my notebooks.

Gary, Indiana, in the heart of the steel country, the new president of the Indiana Federation of Labor said to me: "People don't seem to realize that it's almost over—I mean that the depression is almost ended. Why even our building trades, that have been idle for five years, are getting to work. Of course the Supreme Court decision knocking out the NRA raised cause with many of our unions but the working man doesn't blame Roosevelt for that. And you can believe me that the average little fellow is for Roosevelt. He remembers how things were back in 1932. I wouldn't be surprised if Roosevelt would have just about as many votes in 1936 as he had in 1932."

Over in bustling Chicago, the adopted home of Candidate Colonel Knox, I asked a friendly taxi driver what he thought of Knox. "Knox?" he queried. "Never heard of him."

In Lebanon, Indiana, a garage mechanic, who at first, flung me around with this: "Say, we done more repair and new business the past six months than we done the whole six years before that. Things is boomin'. And the farmers are lousy with dough. And will them babies put a white ball in for Roosevelt. Why, election day in '32 I dropped over at the elevator right over there across the tracks and they was payin' ten cents for corn. Today mature corn is around seventy-five cents. And hogs was less than three cents and now they're around twelve. And wheat was less than thirty cents a bushel and it's way over a dollar now. You thing them high plateau which stretches almost as far as the city that is their objective.

In the last few days roads to assist the troops had been prepared over a considerable distance of the projected advance. Since reconnoitering patrols found the unoccupied territory devoid of enemy forces, the workmen fared forth daily to pave the way for the army. The marching soldiers were gay as they moved southward.

Some sang a popular war song far from complimentary to Emperor Haile Selassie and his ancestors.

Ras Seyoum in Office
Ras Seyoum, Ethiopian governor of Tigre province, is believed to constitute the most serious menace to constitute the most serious menace to the advance on Makala. Supposedly he is lurking in the Tembien mountains with 15,000 men.

Many Ethiopians were in the forward ranks of the Italian troops. They had capitulated to the invaders and were enlisted in the native army corps. Their officers sent them forward to make the first contact with the population—also to test their fidelity.

Officers emphasized the strategic importance of Makale's occupation. Possession of a triangle formed by the city, Asuwa and Adigat, they said, will enable the Italians to reduce the number of troops within the area. Part of more than 100,000 men now in that sector than can be spared to take possession of other territory.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
JEAN, an executive to DONALD, a lawyer, delays her answer when BOBBY WALSH, automobile salesman, asks her to marry him.

At The Golden Feather night club she meets SANDY LAKE, whose business connection is vague. Sandy introduces Bobby to a girl named MISS LEWIS. Bobby sells some bonds for Lewis, who buys a car.

LARRY GENTRY, federal agent, is trailing WINOY LEWIS, bank robber. He learns about the bond connection and questions Bobby. The bonds were stolen. Larry believes the car Lewis bought is armed. Bobby undertakes to find out.

Jeann goes home for a vacation. Sandy comes to see her and agrees to a secret engagement. The bank of which her father is president is robbed. Larry starts a search for the robbers.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIX
IT was dusk by the time Larry Gentry and the other two federal men reached Maplehurst. They drove at once to the bank, where Mr. Dunn was waiting for them.

Larry shook hands, introduced his men, and went to work at once. In a few minutes he had every scrap of information about the robbery that Mr. Dunn could give him. He took an envelope from his pocket and drew out a few postcard-size photographs. He selected two and handed them to Mr. Dunn.

"Recognize either of them?" he asked.

Mr. Dunn looked down at a early face in the conventional profile and sideview shots of a penitentiary rogues' gallery photograph. He gave a start of surprise as he looked at the black type beneath it—"Red Jackson"—and studied the picture with care.

"I'm not absolutely certain," he said at last. "It looks somewhat like him. I didn't get a very good look at him, though—not close up. You see, we were all herded up against the wall, and—"

"I see," said Larry. "How about the other one?"

Mr. Dunn looked at a picture of a perky, black-haired little man with rat-like eyes. Without hesitation he nodded decisively.

"That's the man who held the gun on us while the other one got the cash," he said. He handed the pictures back. Larry pocketed them.

"Who knew about this tear gas installation?" he asked suddenly. Mr. Dunn looked up in some surprise.

"Why, I suppose almost everyone in town knew it," he said. "You know how it is, in a place like this. We saw no special reason for keeping it a secret, anyway."

Larry stood up.

"It's too bad you didn't," he said. "Mr. Hobart might have been saved a very unpleasant experience. You see, this thing of a shot about the Jackson gang, that isn't like the Jackson gang, or any other gang. It's pretty obvious that they knew about the tear gas, and simply shot first in order to prevent Mr. Hobart from using it."

Mr. Dunn looked grave, and shook his head slowly.

"Poor Hobart!" he said. "That's my fault, I suppose, too. I'm glad he didn't have to pay a higher price for it."

LARRY made some remark to reassure him, and then said

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

Betty, aged two, can't dress herself. Betty, aged ten, can't darn her stockings. Betty, aged eighteen, cannot make herself a poticoot.

Betty at two cannot feed herself. At ten she can't set the table. At twenty she cannot cook a meal.

BECAUSE when the time was ripe for beginnings her mother always said, "She makes such a mess of things I can do it more easily myself." You see, she had here eye on results, not on Betty.

It is a recognized fact that the child who is given the opportunity to try will develop dexterity twice as fast as the one who is held back. Furthermore, he (or she) must be encouraged to do things that he cannot do at all.

People who go through life performing only those feats that come easy or natural to them grow moss. And as nothing stands still, but either goes back or forward, deterioration sets in and they cease to do even easy tasks well. The next stage to familiarity with a job is carelessness and lethargy.

Betty at two should have been taught to pull on her stockings, crooked and twisted perhaps, but on. At ten she should be shown how to darn her stockings and sew a ripped hem. The stockings might be a snarl and the dress not so good either, but these two acts in finger dexterity are the best things in the world for her. After two or three tries she might get the hang of it, maybe not.

Perhaps she never will be a nimble sewer. But that effort she makes is the best practice she can have. If she can't get a hem at ten, or a darn either, just when is she going to learn to cut out a simple pattern and make things?

By the same token, other graces are learned by practice, besides finger deftness. These are, for instance, the muscles of the mind. What is true of physical ability and its cultivation is applicable to mental development.

It is wise to give the child things to think about that are just a little beyond him. Not too hard, because that may lead to discouragement. But a bit of difficulty to meet and conquer, even though the victory is only part of a victory, is something gained.

We don't improve ourselves by doing only what we have managed somehow to absorb, but by attempting the next-to-impossible feat.

Betty will learn after much struggle

The MAGNIFICENT Smocks of I-N-D-I-A

Heart failure continues to lead all causes of death. The heart is so intimately related to every function of the human body, however, that a doctor treats his patient with heart disease rather than treating the heart alone.

It must be remembered that the heart is closely associated with circulation of the blood, and that circulation is concerned with action of kidneys, brain, and every other important organ.

In heart disease the central pump is not able to move the blood around the body and back to the heart and lungs. When the heart fails, the flow of the blood becomes sluggish and this sluggishness is seen first in the liver. The liver is so large that it can hold about two-thirds of all the blood in the body. Because the heart has to do more work under these circumstances, it will beat more rapidly and a smaller volume of blood will go with each beat.

One of the first signs of failing circulation is breathlessness on exertion. This occurs particularly with failure of the left side of the heart—the kind of failure that comes with high blood pressure.

Under these circumstances the lungs become congested. The blood which gets into the lungs does not receive enough oxygen, and breathlessness is the result.

A vicious circle forms because lessening of oxygen in the lungs causes acid to accumulate in the muscles of the heart, and this means more difficult action. If the heart itself is suffering from lack of oxygen, certainly those organs and tissues far removed from the heart also will suffer.

This causes all organs and tissues to slow down in their activities. The kidneys cannot get rid of their waste matter, the glands cannot supply the material necessary to keep the body going, and the intestines cannot absorb from foods the proteins necessary to keep the tissues in health.

Certainly it is a mistake, under these circumstances, to place all attention on the heart and not to take care of weaknesses and failures occurring in other organs at the same time.

Whenever we talk about its importance, we point out that the heart never rests and that the only way in which we can rest it during life is to slow its rate. Rest and time are the two factors most important in treating any form of heart disease.

Anxious relatives always want the doctor to make the heart beat slower. He can do this with drugs, but it is done in many cases to greater advantage with the kind of rest that means complete relaxation, with the patient flat in bed.

Sun down, and moon up.
And one star over the hill,
The evening—clear as a crystal globe,
And very still;
A white light over the glow,
Save low in the Eastern sky
There is a moment when rosy fires
Fade and die.
Sharp on the deepening blue
A black spire pierces through,
And the only sound I hear
Is a boy's voice calling clear—
High and clear on the air
To a comrade—lost somewhere.
I think I shall not mind
When my brief day is past,
If only I shall find
My sight unblurred at last;
If only I may hear
High on the evening air,
A comrade calling me
From over the way somewhere.
Sun down, and the coming night
But surely I shall not fear
If one low star leads over the hill,
And that last hour is clear—Selected.

Pilate's Trial of Christ Described

Pilate Scourged Jesus to "Exonerate" Himself, Says Rev. Webb

The Rev. Bert Webb preached at Hope Gospel Tabernacle Sunday night on the trial of Christ before Pilate, using the account in the 19th chapter of John, particularly the first verse: "Then Pilate therefore took Jesus and scourged Him."

"Pilate scourged Jesus," the Rev. Mr. Webb said, "because he wanted to exonerate himself. The tendency of mankind is to shift responsibilities upon someone else. Pilate had to do something about Jesus. You must of necessity say 'Yes Lord, I will live right' or 'No Lord, I will not live right.' The very fact that you do not take an active part for Christ aligns you against Him."

"Pilate did not find any wrong in Jesus, but he took Him and scourged Him. The scourging of a Roman soldier was indeed cruel. A literal translation of one of the passages is that He was so marred and bruised as a result of the scourging that He was hardly recognizable. Pilate possibly thought that the scourging would appease the wrath of the Jews, seeing His bloody wounds back, but they still cried Crucify Him, Crucify Him. Had it not been for the sins of mankind He would not have had to die on the cross. The very wrong that is precious to you tonight, that sin is, the sin that nailed Christ to the Cross. For every sorrow, every broken home, every shameful condition, sin is to blame. The scourging of Christ was necessary that the full penalty for sin might be paid. This, of course, was a prelude to His crucifixion on the cross. Tonight you may have forgiveness because Christ suffered and died for your sins."

"As to the meanest man in Hope. The man who could provide for his family but doesn't and just lets them shift for themselves is a horrible sort of individual. Then there is the man that is continually mean to dumb animals, whipping them unmercifully. I heard of a soldier who was quite seriously wounded in crawling out of a trench under fire to rescue his buddy. Both finally recovered. Some years later the one who had rescued the other happened to see him in a city and rushed to see him only to hear him say 'Get away from me, you beggar.' It seems to me that the man who knows that Christ died for him and is living his life without God qualifies as the meanest man. You owe to God the best years of your life. You can go on persisting in pleasing yourself, but I am serving notice on you that you must pay the penalty. Your soul is vastly valuable to God. Would to God that you would recognize its value."

Mr. Webb announces the following subjects for this week:

Monday night: "The Blood Covenant."

Tuesday night: "The Master Criminal."

Wednesday night: "What Are You Worth?"

Thursday night: "Seven Reasons Why I Believe Christ May Come During the Year 1935."

Friday night: "Who Is to Blame for World Conditions?"

Saturday night: "The Blood Covenant."

Greece Votes to Restore Kingdom

Tremendous Majority Given King George 2d—Ousted 12 Years Ago

ATHENS, Greece.—(AP)—Greece voted the blue monarchist ballot Sunday to bring her monarchic King George II back to the throne he quit by request 12 years ago. Overwhelming majorities were reported in Athens and in the provinces—even in Crete, revolt hotbed of other days—for restoration of the monarchy.

More than 90 per cent of the male voters cast ballots for the monarchy. In Athens, official results showed 138,885 for the restoration, 1,930 against; in Salonika, 124,449 for, 2,877 against. In Peloponnesus the average was well over 90 per cent in favor of the monarchy.

"As of Monday, King George II will be king of the Hellenes," said George Kondylis, head of the new government. "There will be no political parties. They have been broken up by the people themselves, and a new epoch of reconstruction will start."

General Kondylis, who took charge of the government October 10 in the name of the monarchy, telegraphed the former ruler of Greece, King George II, in London that '95 per cent of the nation voted for the monarchy."

General Kondylis appeared on a balcony of the building housing the Ministry of Communications and told a large crowd "even I did not expect such a glorious victory."

Former Premier Tsaldaris said to newspapermen: "We are now on the true road to stability."

Wine Casks Kept Full for 340 Years

Danish Kings Have Been Pouring in Bottle a Week All Along

COPENHAGEN.—(AP)—Three hundred bottles of Rhine wine from this year's harvest have been purchased by the Royal Danish Court, in keeping with a custom which has been followed for 340 consecutive years.

The new wine will be used, as in former years, to replace what is drawn and what evaporates from four large casks which were filled in 1595 by King Christian IV.

The wine is served only at the King's gala New Year's dinner for his household and cabinet members.

Contrary to popular reputation, it is reported, the wine has acquired a taste resembling vinegar. For this reason, it is reported, King Christian has in late years ordered that sugar be served with the wine.

A Book a Day
By Bruce Catton

Waiting Englishmen have been wandering about America, collecting impressions and then going home to write books ever since the republic was in swaddling clothes but it has retained for A. G. Macdonell to sound a new note.

Mr. Macdonell's travel "A Visit to America" is a witty and goodnatureed account of his travels and travails in our land during the fall of 1934, declares it is foolish for foreigners to compare America with any one European nation.

The United States, he says, is nothing less than a continent in itself, and it can fairly be compared only with Europe as a whole. It has its wild and lawless areas, for instance, as Europe has the Balkans but to compare it with Germany of England, which do not have such areas, is unjust, for Germany and England are only small parts of the European ensemble.

This English visitor seems to have enjoyed himself immensely in America, and his book provokes a long series of chuckles, since he writes with a deft, unlabored wit—as, for instance, when he says that American football combines the least pleasant features of English Rugby and the World War.

He liked Boston, Baltimore, Helena, Mont. Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Louisville, Ky., very much indeed. He did not care so much for Chicago, Butte, Los Angeles, and most of Texas.

He found New York Restaurant cooking atrocious and Kentucky cooking divine. Amazingly, he reports that our auto traffic manners are far better than those of England.

He has written a pleasant book. Macmillan offers it for $2.50.

Glorifying Yourself
By Alicia Hart

Just as too many accessories—even though they are handsome—spoil the well-groomed effect for which you strive, too great a collection of attention-getting beauty aids, worn at one time, make you look haphazardly turned out instead of neat and trim.

The woman who starts out wearing long, artificial eyelashes, an intricate coiffure, a black beauty spot on cheek or chin and scarlet nails impresses others in much the same way as one who dresses up a frock with beads, earrings, bracelets, a mesh collar and jeweled belt.

The easiest way to solve the problem of what to put on and what to leave off is to decide first of all just which feature or which part of your face you wish to dramatize. If you have nice eyes, make them up as much as you like, wear an off-the-brow hairdress and don't use enough rouge and lipstick to draw attention away from your eyes.

If you have a beautiful mouth and chin, forget about mascara and eye-shadow and concentrate on learning how to apply lipstick to accentuate your mouth. Girls with lovely ears are the ones who should wear their hair off the face and go in for earrings.

Broad faces look less wide if hair is parted in the center. Long ones, and long noses too, look shorter if the hair is done with a side part. If you have a wellshaped head, wear your hair flat across the back. Incidentally, ringlet curls, unless they are pinned down instead of flaring, lend themselves well to large faces, whether round or oval. Leave these for girls with rather small features.

Unless your hands are truly pretty, better wear neutral polish on your nails. Vivid tones attract attention to your hands, of course.
